ABSTRACT: In the 1920s, Henry Ford was searching for a way to circumvent the British monopoly on rubber. To accomplish this goal, he established two rubber plantations in the Brazilian jungle, Fordlandia and Belterra, both of which operated under the name Companhia Ford Industrial do Brasil. Work began on these projects in 1926, with the town of Fordlandia founded in 1928 and Belterra in 1934. Ultimately, the two plantations were not successful, with Henry Ford II selling all of the land back to the Brazilian government in 1945. The Companhia Ford Industrial do Brasil Records contains photographs, correspondence, reports, accounting data, and employee information pertaining to the operations.
