HISTORICAL NOTE

Henry Ford resigned as President of Ford Motor Company in 1919, succeeded by his only son, Edsel Ford. In March of 1923 construction began on the Albert Kahn-designed Dearborn Engineering Laboratory. The building was completed at the end of 1924 and although he had offices in other locations, Henry Ford's office there became his most frequently used and the home base for his office staff, including E. G. Liebold and Frank Campsall. The building was built near Ford's Fair Lane estate and next to his beloved Edison Institute. It also housed the offices and publishing facilities of the Dearborn Publishing Company (publisher of the Dearborn Independent and Ford News), the C.E. Johansson Company, Ford radio stations, and engineering and experimental operations. The building was also the site of round table luncheons in the dining room, where Henry Ford and various executives would often dine and discuss company business. Henry Ford's main office remained at the Dearborn Engineering Laboratory until his death in 1947, allowing for the accumulation of the bulk of his office correspondence in this subgroup.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The Engineering Laboratory Office records subgroup is comprised of six series which are found in two accessions. This finding aid contains information on the second series in Accession 285, the Library bureau filing system series, July 1921-1929 (429.6 cubic ft. and 6 oversize boxes). Accession 285 also includes the In-house subject and name filing system series, January-June, 1921 (7.6 cubic ft.); the Amberg Filing System series, 1930-1949 (781.6 cubic ft. and 1 oversize box); and the In-house name file with subjects filing system series, 1950-1952 (14 cubic ft.). Accession 284, which has its own finding aid, contains the Business and personal correspondence series, 1920 (13.2 cubic ft.); and the Business and personal correspondence addendum series, 1920 (2.8 cubic ft.). Essentially, this subgroup contains an unbroken run of Henry Ford Office correspondence from 1920 through 1952. During these years however, filing systems changed, which is reflected in the names of the series into which the subgroup has been broken.

The Engineering laboratory office records subgroup is a remarkable collection of material that documents a period of more than thirty years of activity of one of the world's great industrialists and his company. The records are arranged by year and then alphabetically according to the filing system used during that year. Typically for each year files can be found for most domestic and foreign Ford Motor Company branches, including Highland Park and the Rouge plant, as well as most company departments such as accounting, advertising, auditing, disbursement, employment, chemical laboratory, chemical and metallurgical, engineering, medical, purchasing, sociological, service, the President's office, general sales, and traffic and for other ventures pursued by Henry Ford, especially those that were managed by his secretary E.G. Liebold, such as Henry Ford Hospital, Dearborn Publishing Company, Dearborn State Bank, Detroit, Toledo and Ironton Railroad and Dearborn Realty and Construction Company. Additional subjects that have multiple folders through the years include antiques, Dearborn Water Works, Dearborn Inn, Dearborn Country Club, Berry Schools, Edison Institute, Boreham House Estate, Michigan Bell

Telephone Company, Michigan Central Railroad Company, Michigan Public Utilities Commission, Henry Ford Flour Mill, Henry Ford and Son, Lincoln Motor Company, Lincoln and Lincoln-Mercury Divisions, Botsford Inn, Wayside Inn, Michigan Iron Land and Lumber Company, Hamilton and Rossville Hydraulic Company, Henry Ford's yacht Sialia, Firestone Tire and Rubber Company and various Village Industries.

Also included in the collection is material about the Edison Botanic Research Corporation, a corporation formed by Henry Ford and Firestone in 1927 to research sources of domestic rubber, based out of Thomas Edison's Fort Myers Laboratory. Accident reports and insurance information from the firms Lucking, Helfman, Lucking and Hanlon; Kelly, Halla, Peacock and Hughes and Johnson and Higgins are found in multiple years as well. Individuals with multiple folders include Henry, Edsel and Clara Ford, newspaper editor Arthur Brisbane, Jens Jensen, Herbert Hoover, Ford real estate agent William T. Gregory, John Burroughs, G.K. Chesterton, Calvin Coolidge, Thomas Edison, Sialia captain Perry T. Stakes, Harvey Firestone, Albert Kahn, and missionary Joseph Bailie. There is one letter from Chinese revolutionary Sun Yat-Sen inviting Henry Ford to expand automobile industry work in China.

The records also include hundreds of thousands of letters from individuals asking Henry Ford for financial assistance, employment, donation of a vehicle, wanting to donate or sell something to him for his museum, providing opinions on Ford products, or opinions on projects and ventures Henry Ford was involved with or supporting; the letters offer insight into the social conditions of the period. While there is typically no way to access this particular material by subject, as it is generally filed by the last name of the correspondent, almost any box in the collection contains these types of letters. The records are worth checking if the name of an individual or subject is known as well as a general time period. In some cases, office staff and later archivists handling the collection have provided extensive cross-reference sheets in the boxes to aid in subject access.

OTHER NOTES

Description of filing system: Use of the Library Bureau's Automatic Index System was initiated in July 1921. This system was a numerical filing system based upon the names of individual correspondents or companies. By July 1923 it was necessary to adopt an expanded version of the Library Bureau system, probably as the result of an ever-expanding volume of incoming mail. This first expansion added additional, and more precise, subdivisions of personal and corporate names. A second, and similar, expansion of the system was adopted in January 1927 and was used through the calendar year of 1929.

For filing purposes, the name of the correspondent, or the company, or the subject of letter would be alphabetized. Although there were general rules to follow for deciding which word in a company name or subject term was primary and which was secondary, there was in reality little consistency. Therefore, researchers must search under related terms and various combinations to find the relevant materials.

Each alphabetized item was then assigned a code number derived as follows:

- the first part of the code number came from the first letter of the last name of an individual correspondent or the first letter of the principal word of the company name;
- the second part of the code number came from the first letter of first name of the individual correspondent or the first letter of the secondary word of the company name.

Subject Access: Because this system was not intended to provide information storage or retrieval by subject, the best mode of access is by name of correspondents or businesses associated with a particular subject. However, a number of subject approaches to the accession have been devised:

- Some subject headings were used over a number of years: e.g., Antiques, Applications, Banks, Dance Books and Music, Memoranda, and Unsigned Letters.

- Often, name headings can serve as surrogates for subject headings: e.g, Dearborn, Detroit, Thomas A. Edison (various subheadings), Edison Institute, Henry Ford (various subheadings), Ford Motor Company (various subheadings such as department or branch names)

- L.J. Thompson, of the Henry Ford Office, prepared the original accession inventories and provided numerous subject annotations to the folder labels in the box list.

- Ford Motor Company Archives staff added numerous pink half sheet cross references to the accession. These cross references provide the researcher with additional name, and sometimes subject, cross references. The cross reference forms contain the name(s) and number(s), and sometimes a brief abstract of the materials included in, the referenced file(s).

- From July 1921 through 1925, folders labeled as "Subject" appear at ten point intervals in the Library Bureau classification system (e.g., "A10 Subject 10", "B20 Subject 20", and so on); between 1926 and 1929, "Single Name or Subject" files replace the "Subject" files. The intent of the system might have been to file either subject cross reference sheets or actual documents based upon an analysis of the subject content in these files. A random survey of these folders, however, indicates that the Henry Ford Office Staff did not utilize these files for subject access: non-subject specific documents and name cross references are found in these files.

- For two half-year periods (July-December 1921, and January-July 1922) "Cross Index" cards (Library Bureau Form #06046) were used. Filed before the "A" files at the beginning of each of the two half year periods, were a series of alphabetically arranged (one card for each letter of the alphabet) 8.5 x 11 cards filled with names and some subjects and cross-references to other related headings with their corresponding file code number. Unfortunately, this rather complete indexing system was only used for a period of one year.
